

Dining in La Mancha

The Foods & Flavours of Don Quixote

"I have here an onion and a little cheese and a few scraps of bread," said Sancho, "but they are not victuals fit for a valiant knight like your worship."

La Mancha cheese board

Served with a regional wine

"Provided I have enough to eat, I can eat it as well, or better, standing, and by myself, than seated alongside of an emperor."

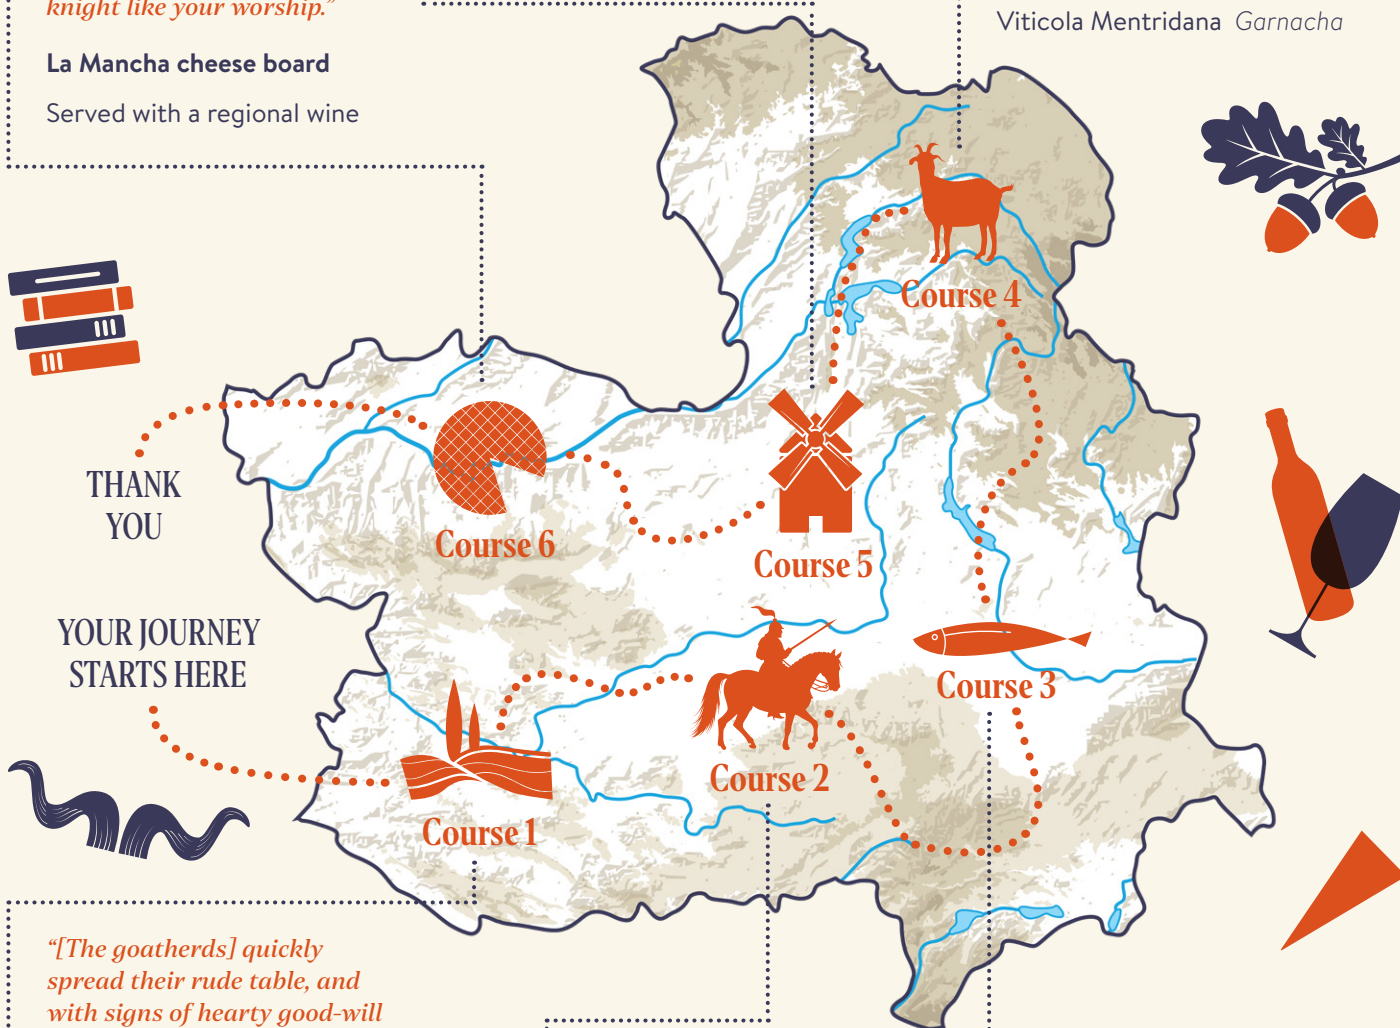

Honey and egg tart

Golden Thyme
Havana 3 Rum, saffron infused honey syrup, lemon, orange juice

"All they did was to eat in silence and stare at their guests, who with great elegance and appetite were stowing away pieces [of goat] as big as one's fist."

Bacon-wrapped roasted goat saddle with raisins and acorns
